Read the passage to answer questions 7-8

There never used to be as many cars on the road as there are today. It seems that as we improve the roads, more people want to drive. The more roads there are, the more cars there are on them. In addition, people are driving bigger and bigger cars. This also contributes to more crowded roads. However, this trend will probably change as soon as gasoline prices increase. The higher the price of gasoline, the smaller cars get. One thing we probably won't be seeing any time soon is faster cars. If you want to get somewhere quickly, you still have to go by plane. Fortunately, plane tickets are a lot cheaper than they used to be.

7. What is said about roads and cars?
